Angler and Boater Education Identification

Who can name this creature?

Thanks to Mike Petrick for this picture. Mike was fishing at Lake Ray Roberts and his line got tangled with this rock.

This little creature is causing all kinds of problems.

Zebra Mussels!

Please share this information with your students.

It is mandatory to share invasive species video during Boater Education!

It is mandatory to clean, drain and dry your boat in Texas!

Dear Boater Education Instructor:

The following information is required to be presented in your State Certified Boater Education Course.

NEWS FLASH! New requirements for your Boater Education Course.

1. “Clean, Drain, Dry” Helping to stop the spread of invasive species.
 2. “Never Happens” water safety video.
1. It is a Class C Misdemeanor for a boat operator who does not follow the “Clean, Drain, Dry” rule. Here is the link to the news release and a link to a short You Tube Video for your classroom course. The spread of invasive species is serious and we need to emphasis this in our classes.
 - Statewide Boat-draining Rule Takes Effect July 1
ATHENS – Beginning July 1, boaters must drain all water from their boat and on-board receptacles before leaving or approaching a body of fresh water anywhere in Texas.
 - <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=h2IIHvWB3A0>
You Tube video about invasive species and “Clean, Drain, Dry”
 2. “Never Happens” is the new water safety video that will be part of all Youth Drivers Education courses in Texas starting this month. It is a video of water related incidents as told by survivors. The video was produced with teenagers telling their story in an effort to reach young people with a water safety message. It is a powerful video. It is a new requirement to show this video as part of your TPWD Boater Education Course. The following link is to the official TPWD YouTube channel. When I teach a class, I show it directly from You Tube. If you have difficulty with YouTube or you do not have internet access in your classroom, instructions for downloading a high quality copy that you may burn to a DVD will be posted on the TPWD instructor resource page soon.

Are you up for the challenge?

Do you need a great alternative unit or a new unit for hands on rod building?

Custom Rods – Outdoor Adventures II classes may be interested in building their own custom rods.

Rod Building Classes

Brought to you by Stutzman Hells Canyon Custom Rods

Our rod building program allows us the opportunity to share this art with many. All supplies shown are included in the kit, to ensure that when your project is complete, you will have a beautiful, fully functioning rod built by your own hands. All types of rod kits are available, such as spinning, fly, and casting. Options available on the order form allow you to choose your own design. A cork grip comes standard with all rod kits, but one of the unique opportunities offered with our kits is a custom grip made out of your choice of wood. All of the blanks come with a lifetime warranty, the only cost to you is shipping and handling.

Contact Kim Stutzman, stut3@icloud.com Stutzman Hells Canyon Custom Rods.

Let me know if you are interested in custom rod building. Maybe a future teacher workshop could be created if there is enough interest.

Potential fundraiser for your program.

Know Your Doves

As a hunter, it is your legal and moral responsibility to identify your targets before you shoot. There are at least eight species of doves and pigeons that occur in Texas, of which only four are legal to hunt. The following descriptions are to help you recognize these eight species and may prevent you from making an embarrassing and costly mistake.

Unprotected Birds

(May Be Hunted Anytime)

Rock Dove

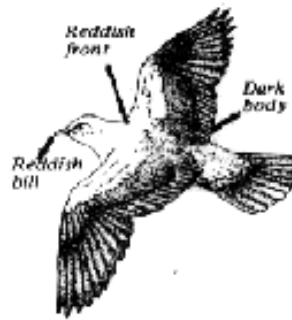

Common in cities and around farms. Large in size and varies in color from gray, brown, to all white. All have white rump patch. They generally fly in flocks and do not readily mix with other wild birds. It is an introduced species and is often raised by individuals as are other varieties of racing and fancy pigeons.

Eurasian Collared-Dove

Eurasian collared-doves are bigger, more aggressive and more prolific than our native doves. It is pale to sandy gray, with a slight pinkish shade to the head and breast. Their bills are black, the irises of their eyes are red, and their legs and feet are mauve. Their tails are white when viewed from the underside, and the ends are squared off (rather than pointed). The "collar" is a narrow black crescent around the nape of the neck, fringed with an off-white outline.

Protected Birds

(May NOT Be Hunted Anytime)

Red-billed Pigeon

Similar in size to the domestic pigeon. Bluish gray to purple in color. Bill is reddish. Uncommon in Rio Grande Valley but can be found occasionally near larger brush tracts adjacent to Rio Grande. Will fly with whitewings. Larger size is good key. Can be easily misidentified.

Legal Game Birds

(May Be Hunted During Open Seasons)

Mourning Dove

Slightly smaller than white-winged dove with long pointed tail. Generally seen in flights of one or two birds. May mix with flights of whitewings but can be readily distinguished by its more rapid wing beat, erratic flight path, and pointed tail. Common throughout Texas with large concentration in farm and ranch country.

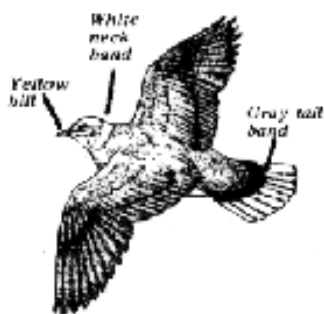

White-winged Dove

Larger than a mourning dove with conspicuous white bar on wing and a long, moderately rounded tail. Generally in flocks during September before fall migration to Central America. Common along the Rio Grande and increasing in number throughout South, Central, and West Texas.

White-tipped (White-fronted) Dove

Slightly larger than white-winged dove with cinnamon colored wing linings (underside) and large, moderately rounded tail. Size and shape are similar to whitewing. South Texas is the only place in the United States where this nonmigratory dove can be found. Common adjacent to brush areas and citrus groves. Generally seen as single bird flying close to the ground.

Band-tailed Pigeon

Locally common in oak and pine woods in the mountains of the Trans-Pecos Region. Large size, white neck band, and broad gray tail band distinguish this bird from all others.

Remember, all birds except Rock Dove (Domestic Pigeons), Eurasian Collared-Doves, Starlings, English Sparrows, Grackles, Ravens, Red-winged Blackbirds, Cowbirds, and Crows are protected under state law and the fine for shooting a protected bird can be from $10 to $200 per bird. Check federal laws for additional regulations.
